

Introduction to Ethics

PHIL 160

Summer Session I

1:15-2:45pm

How should I live? The way we answer this ethical question impacts our day-to-day decisions and the decisions that might change our lives.

This introductory course is designed for people who want to learn about some of the greatest ethical theories ever developed and who want to answer these questions for themselves.

What does morality require of us? What makes life worth living? What is the connection, if any, between acting morally and living a good, happy, or fulfilling life? What conditions would have to hold for us to meet the demands of morality?
