Dear Professor Heinz,

Thank you very much for your letter. I wrote to you some ten days ago. But it has just occurred to me that I may have put on the envelope of my letter only enough postage for surface mail (I bought a sheet of the wrong sort of stamp). So I'm sending you this second letter just in case the first is still in Mid-Atlantic.

Even in the last letter I had to apologise for not replying sooner. The trouble was that I had lost your letter, and had been hoping to find it. I am not certain that I have remembered it correctly, but if you asked me whether I might like to read a paper at the Conference you are arranging, my reply is that I would be delighted to. The subject that I suggest is "Personal Identity and Distributive Justice."

I realise though that by now you have probably already planned the programme. If so, I am very sorry for my own sake for my inefficiency, as well as sorry for my rudeness to you.

Yours sincerely,
